Calling All Angels was conceived to be a prelude to a service of worship. The story embraces the Annunciation, the season of Advent, and the Christmas event. The Angel Gabriel, as God’s messenger, is given the awesome task to think of a way to announce to the whole world that the Holy Child has been born. The children’s choir becomes the angel host singing, “Gloria in excelsis Deo!”, and inspiring the congregation to join with them in the singing of the hymn, Angels We Have Heard on High.
